President's Reflections

Taking new approaches to reach more learners

By Sherry Campbell

There are a number of barriers preventing adults with low literacy from seeking out programs to improve their literacy skills. A sense of stigma at the prospect of being identified as a person with low literacy consistently tops the reasons why so few people seek help.

Domestic Workers Adult ESL Program

Partnerships and program flexibility key to success

Domestic workers – typically women from South East Asia, Latin America and Eastern Europe working as caregivers to become Canadian citizens – have busy schedules, do not make much money and often feel isolated.
